

ACCREDITATION (UK)

ABRSM graded exams for Theory of Music, individual instruments and singing (excluding Practical Musicianship) are accredited in England by the Office of the Qualifications and Examinations Regulator (Ofqual) and the corresponding regulatory authorities in Wales (DCELLS) and Northern Ireland (CCEA). They are part of the Qualifications and Credit Framework (QCF), a scheme for recognizing skills and qualifications in the UK education system.

ABRSM exams are listed on the Register of Regulated Qualifications – <http://register.ofqual.gov.uk>.

Ofqual has been launched as the new independent regulator of qualifications, exams and tests in England. The legal status of Ofqual is being established through legislation with the intention that it will be accountable to the UK Parliament and that a clear separation will be made between its role in ensuring that qualifications are fair and accurate and that of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA, which is to become the Qualifications and Curriculum Development Agency). Until this legislation is passed, Ofqual is legally part of the QCA.
